

Felled trees replaced

A number of trees next to the Umhlali off ramp from the N2 North were chopped down recently when Umgeni Water laid new pipes for the North Coast bulk water supply pipeline. When the work was complete, however, Umgeni Water project director Krish Govender bought 50 indigenous trees and shrubs to replace the ones cut down. They were planted recently by owner of Belton's garden services Belton Mwali (left) and Umgeni Water environmental officer Njabula Mkhosana (right). It was a case of déjà vu for Belton as more than twenty years ago he planted the original trees that were cut down.
